Manager CommentaryFund commentary

The nReach Capital IP Worldwide Flexible Fund delivered a return of +1.01% in April, despite spikes in volatility in global markets. While the return was below the Worldwide Multi-Asset Flexible sector average of +2.06%, the fund outperformed several major indices, including the S&P 500 (-0.76%) and MSCI World ETF (+0.72%), highlighting its commitment to the core philosophy of high predictability and low volatility.

The fund's domestic equity exposure was a key performance driver, supported by the strong performance of the JSE Top 40, which gained +3.46% on positive macro developments in China and South Africa. Local positioning was increased in advance of these shifts, contributing to stable, positive returns.

Offshore equity positions, particularly in the U.S., were impacted by the imposition of import tariffs by the Trump administration, which triggered a sharp but temporary global selloff.

The fund's fixed income exposure continued to play a stabilising role, with the S&P South Africa Sovereign Bond 1+ Year Index returning +0.75%. This allocation remained consistent with the fund's mandate of preserving capital while delivering consistent returns.

April's result reflects the fund's focus on risk-adjusted returns and capital preservation, with an emphasis on remaining defensively positioned yet flexible enough to capture tactical opportunities within its mandate.

Market commentary

April was marked by increased uncertainty across global markets, driven by geopolitical shocks and shifting policy expectations. The most disruptive event was the imposition of wide-ranging import tariffs by the U.S. government, sparking a selloff that saw the S&P 500 fall -0.76% and over $6.6 trillion temporarily erased from global markets.

The U.S. Federal Reserve opted to keep interest rates unchanged at 4.25%–4.50%, reflecting a cautious approach amid signs of stagflation—slowing growth paired with stubborn inflation. This uncertainty led to a flight to safety.

South African markets outperformed, with the JSE Top 40 gaining +3.46%, lifted by strong resource sector earnings and improved fiscal sentiment. Local bonds also remained resilient, with the S&P South Africa Sovereign Bond 1+ Year Index returning +0.75%.

The ZAR depreciated by 1.48% against the USD, which added a modest boost to the value of offshore holdings in rand terms.
